DATING VIOLENCE AND FORCED SEX AMONG TEENAGERS –
Results from the 2003 Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance System.

By the Rogers Park Young Women’s Action Team (June 11, 2004)

Based on the 2003 Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance System (YRBSS) which monitors six categories of priority health risk behaviors among youth, dating violence is a serious issue for teens. The YRBSS includes a national school-based survey conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention as well as state and local school-based surveys conducted by education and health agencies. The 2003 report summarizes results from the national survey, 32 state surveys, and 18 local surveys conducted among students in grades 9-12 during February-December 2003. For the national YRBSS, 15,240 questionnaires were completed in 158 schools.

Overall, the prevalence of having been forced to have sexual intercourse was higher among black (12.3%) and Hispanic (10.4%) than white (7.3%) students; higher among Hispanic female (13.0%) than black female (12.9%) and white female (11.2%) students; and higher among black male (11.7%) and Hispanic male (7.6%) than white male (3.7%) students.

Prevalence of having been forced to have sexual intercourse ranged from 5.4% to 11.0% across state surveys (median: 8.7%) and from 5.5% to 12.4% across local surveys (median: 8.5%).

LOCAL FINDINGS: CHICAGO

Dating Violence
968 surveys were collected from students in Chicago.

During the 12 months preceding the survey, 12.0% of students in Chicago had been hit, slapped, or physically hurt on purpose by their boyfriend or girlfriend (i.e., dating violence).

Overall, the prevalence of dating violence was higher among female (12.4%) than male (11.3%) students. There was no specific information regarding racial differences in dating violence.

Prevalence of dating violence ranged 7.3% to 16.0% across local surveys (median: 11.7%). This suggests that at 12.0% Chicago youth find themselves at the higher levels of experiencing dating violence.

Forced Sexual Intercourse
In Chicago, 8.4% of students had ever been physically forced to have sexual intercourse when they did not want to.

The prevalence of having been forced to have sexual intercourse was higher among male (8.4%) than female (7.7%) students. There was no data available about racial differences in forced sexual intercourse.

Prevalence of having been forced to have sexual intercourse ranged from 5.5% to 12.4% across local surveys (median: 8.5%). Chicago youth were slightly below the median.
