Male Violence against Women and Girls – Young Men’s Perspectives
A Study by Rogers Park Young Women’s Action Team (June 2007)

The YWAT surveyed 226 young men ages 11 to 22 about their perspectives on violence against women and girls.

96% of young men said that issues of violence against women and girls are moderately or very important to them. Only 4% said that these issues are not important.

17% of young men have considered speaking out publicly about violence against women and girls.

18% of young men have considered joining or working with organizations that actively confront sexism and take steps to prevent violence against women and girls.

24% of young men have considered participating in a public march, rally or demonstration organized to protest violence against women and girls.

But 64% of young men have asked someone to stop using derogatory or negative terms to refer to girls and women (i.e. slut, ho, bitch) and...

53% have intervened during a physical confrontation between a boy and girl.

Source: Engaging Young Men as Allies Research Report (June 2007)
For a copy of our report, please contact us at rpywat@hotmail.com and for more information about YWAT visit our website – www.youngwomensactionteam.org.

To view a full visual summary of the survey results, visit www.surveymonkey.com/Report.asp?U=373216085847

Speak Up, Step Up, Be Fearless - Become a Male Ally!